DRUNK HUBBY HOPS IN BED — WITH WIFE'S SNOOZING BOYFRIEND

. . . and all hell breaks loose!

By JAMES MORTON
Weekly World News

Drunk hubby John Biro went berserk when he slipped into his wife's bed and snuggled up — to her sleeping boyfriend!

Fists flew as both men leaped out of bed and viciously tried to punch each other's lights out in the darkened bedroom.

Boyfriend Carl Apsall got the worst of it — a busted nose and a broken jaw.

"What do you expect someone to do when they find a strange man in their wife's bed?" said Biro, a trucker in Westbury, England.

The tipsy hubby had gone to the home of his estranged wife Susan hoping for a reconciliation. She wasn't there, so Biro undressed, curled up in her bedroom closet and dozed off.

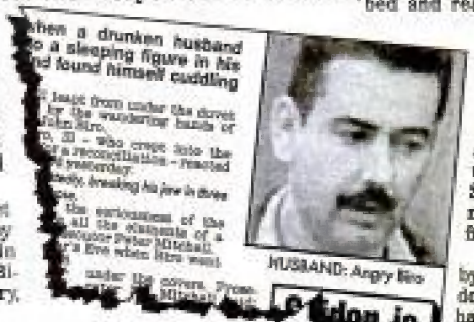
While the unsuspecting husband snoozed away, Apsall let himself in and went to bed. Biro woke up, saw a figure sleeping in his wife's bed and assumed it was her.

So he sneaked out of the closet, slipped between the sheets and cuddled up — till his wandering hands woke Apsall with a start.

When the stunned hubby realized he was fondling a guy, he dragged his naked rival out of bed and rearranged his face, shattering Apsall's jaw in three places and breaking his nose.

Unsuspecting Susan didn't hear about the brawl until the next day. She had spent the night at her girlfriend's house.

The furious hubby pleaded guilty to doing grievous bodily harm and paid almost $2,500 in fines and compensation. He also was ordered to perform 140 hours of community service. "If it weren't for the seriousness of the injuries, the circumstances would have all the elements of a bedroom farce," prosecutor Peter Mitchell said.



BEDROOM BOO-BOO! John Biro's wild brawl with his wife's boyfriend made headlines around the world.

BAFFLING 'CHAIR OF DEATH' KILLS AGAIN

LETHAL chair's original owner put a curse on it after he was sentenced to hang for murder in 1702.

VICTIM No. 63 Carlo Pugnani.

By RANDY JEFFRIES / Weekly World News

YORKSHIRE, England — The infamous "chair of death" has claimed its 64th victim: An American woman who plunged down an elevator shaft less than half an hour after sitting in the cursed seat!

The eerie oaken chair was originally owned by an English murderer named Tom Busby. Just before he was hanged in 1702, Busby spat out a bitter curse, saying, "Anyone who sits on my chair after my death will die shortly afterward."

The chair still stands in Busby's old home, the Busby Stoop Inn.

And sadly, his chilling pronouncement has proved true. Since his hanging, 293 years ago, Busby's curse has allegedly killed 64.

"The deaths have all been ruled as 'accidental,'" said Nigel Staull, a noted English historian and expert on the chair. "But it's certainly no coincidence that everyone who ever sat in it has perished under mysterious circumstances."

The latest victim, Ann Conelatter, 37, was a bookkeeper from Trenton, N.J., vacationing in Yorkshire. Before her trip, Miss Conelatter reportedly bragged to friends that she would "sit in the famed chair of death and live to tell about it."

Unfortunately, before the staff at the inn could stop her, she sat in the chair, sealing her fate. Twenty-six minutes later she boarded her hotel elevator and the cable snapped. She fell six stories to her death.

Miss Conelatter is the second person in three years to die from the deadly curse. The last death, that of repairman Carlo Pugnani, occurred in June of 1993 and was widely covered by the press, including Weekly World News' June 30, 1993 issue.

At that time, inn owner Tony Earnshaw was asked why the chair had not been destroyed. He replied, "It's a piece of history I can't bear to part with. Besides, I don't make anyone sit in it. I warn them of the risk, and if they still want to give it a try, well, that's their decision to make."

PSYCHIC LOBSTER EARNS GAMBLER $4 MILLION!

GRATEFUL Michael Stanghast holds up the lucky lobster that has earned him millions.

By RANDY JEFFRIES / Weekly World News

DENVER, Colo. — Gambler Michael Stanghast has made over $4 million betting on the dog races, based on tips — from a psychic lobster!

At least that's what the eccentric handicapper says. And although many call him crazy as a loon no one can argue with his success at picking winners.

Clawed critter picks dog-race winners with amazing accuracy!

Stanghast says his crustacean pal Lester gives him hot tips through ESP, telling him which dogs are hot and which are not.

"I put on my lucky hat, place Lester on his favorite fence post in the backyard and open my mind," says Stanghast. "Lester uses mental telepathy to send me impressions of the winning dogs."

The 42-year-old former luggage factory foreman has been retired since 1981 — thanks, he says, to Lester.

Stanghast's business associates say he's weird and wild but he's definitely a first-rate gambler.

Rudolph Jayspur

"I'm not certain Michael really gets the information from the lobster or just imagines that he does," says Rudolph Jayspur, Stanghast's personal accountant and investment adviser.

"But the bottom line is simply this: Even if he's hallucinating the whole thing, his bets pay off 87 percent of the time. And it's made him a very rich man."

The odd story began six years ago, in 1989 when Stanghast and some friends were dining at a seafood restaurant.

"I walked by the lobster tank and heard a voice in my head — loud and clear — saying, 'Save my life and I'll make you rich.'

"I looked in the tank and saw Lester staring at me. Something made me buy him and take him home.

"The next day I woke up with his voice in my head saying, 'Easy Boy in the third race.'

"Sure enough there was a dog named Easy Boy running that afternoon. I bet on him and made $257.50."

That was the beginning of a very lucrative association — so lucrative that Stanghast can't go to his favorite track in person anymore.

"Michael used to come to my window to place his bets," says a clerk at Mile High Greyhound Park who refused to give her name.

"But it got to the point that hundreds of people would crowd around when they saw him at the betting window. They'd look to see which dog he bet on. Then they'd all bet on his dog and drive the odds down."

So he sends others to make bets for him in Denver and spends much of his time jet-setting all over the U.S. to tracks where he's not recognized. His current estimated net winnings are $4,264,000.

Most Americans don't know how TALL they are!

Do you know how tall you are? Don't be too sure — because a survey reveals most people don't know their own height!

We put the question to 500 people in four cities, then measured each of them with doctor's office equipment.

Incredibly, 41 percent were an inch or more off — and 26 an inch of their correct height. Only 30 percent of the men were off by that much.

Farthest off was a man from Marion, Ohio, who thought he was 5-foot-3 — but he measured 5-foot-8.

from a few surprised folks we measured:

"Thanks — I feel great!" gushed New Yorker Sandra P. who is 5-foot-3½ — an inch and a half taller than she thought.

"That's crazy!" said Floridian William G. He said he was 5-

NEW NO-SWEAT WAY TO FLUSH AWAY FAT

You can lose 20 lbs. without even trying!

By MARY CONNORS / Weekly World News

If the big job of dieting is too much to take on, try nibbling away at those excess pounds with this brand-new list of weight-loss tips from the world's top diet experts.

The pound-shedding pointers won't leave you hungry or faint from starvation and they'll help you lose up to 20 pounds in just a couple of months, experts agree. Here are some of their most helpful hints:

- Drink club soda — with a slice of lemon, if you wish — instead of pop and save 150 calories per can.
- Always shop for food on a full stomach so you can resist temptation better.
- Use smaller plates. They make small portions look like big portions.
- At restaurants, order all your meals a la carte. The main dish alone is usually enough.
- Don't wear baggy clothing when you eat. Roomy clothes make you feel that you can eat more. Better to choose clothing with a tight waistband so you'll stop eating quicker.
- Instead of drinking a glass of orange juice, eat a medium orange. It'll save you 35 calories.
- Buy only margarines with water listed first on the ingredients list. They have less fat.
- Get plenty of sleep to boost your willpower. You can't fend off temptation very well when you're worn out.
- Eat at the same time every day. A regular schedule helps you control food intake.
- Don't taste your cooking unless you have to.
- Eat slowly and savor every bite. In the end, you'll eat less.
- Eat hard ice cream instead of soft ice cream. You'll save 50 calories per cone.
- Switch to light cuisine cooking. Borrow cookbooks from the library if you can't afford to buy them.
- Put stews, gravies and soups in the refrigerator for a while. Fat will rise to the surface and you can skim it off for a big calorie savings.
- Put yogurt in recipes calling for sour cream and save 17 calories per tablespoon.
- Listen to cassette tapes in your car rather than the radio, so you don't have to hear commercials for fast-food goodies.
- Cut your pasta intake in half and fill up instead with sliced vegetables.
- Spend some extra time on your appearance. You'll feel better about yourself and you'll be less likely to overeat.
- Snack on popcorn. You get only 25 calories per cup of air-popped popcorn.
- Eat foods that make you work for your meal. Unboned chicken and shellfish are great because you have to struggle for every bite.

A genius is somebody who was a crackpot until his ideas caught on.

RESEARCH REVEALS:

Dogs & cats have exciting dreams!

Even couch potato cats and dogs live exciting lives in their dreams, new research shows.

Scientists have studied animal sleep and concluded that they have sensational dreams full of romance, wild adventure and frightening experiences.

"Dogs are more active when they're dreaming," said Boyd McNeally, a researcher who's made a specialty of the subject. "They growl and move their legs and often bark aloud.

"Cats are having just as much fun, but they're quieter about it."

HOW TO TELL IF YOU'RE HEXED

By MARY FOLLERT / Weekly World News

If your life takes a sudden downturn and things keep going from bad to worse, watch out — you could be hexed, new research proves.

People who wish you ill can actually put a silent spell on you, casting the shadow of evil over every aspect of your existence.

Yet, although such spells can ruin your health, destroy your career and shatter your family, you may never even know you are the victim of a curse, top psychics say.

"In fact, most victims of hexes have no idea they have been targeted and that their 'bad luck' is actually plotted by an enemy," said medium Dorthea Landlace of Johannesburg, South Africa. "They assume they're simply having a run of bad luck.

"If an enemy is really determined to destroy your life he can do it — by repeating his hexes mercilessly until you are crushed under the weight of bad fortune.

"There are certain signs that indicate you are hexed," Mrs. Landlace said in an article for Otherworld Weekly last month.

"They tend to be present no matter what form your bad luck takes. If you have extremely bad fortune and you suffer from four or more of these signs, chances are good someone's trying to harm you.

"But don't be frightened to find you are hexed. You can overcome it simply by contacting a psychic and learning special spells to ward off evil, by praying for your enemies, or by wearing garlic or a good luck charm."

Here, according to Mrs. Landlace, are the most common signs that you are struggling under a hex:

- Itchy skin.
- Sudden changes in body temperature.
- Unexplained bodily aches and pains.
- Sleeplessness.
- Chronic fatigue.
- Depression, hopelessness.
- Sexual problems.
- Sudden problems with personal hygiene, such as B.O., bad breath, acne, dandruff.
- Runaway weight gain.
- Trouble concentrating.

Dog eats man's new car!

SYDNEY, Australia — Excited Andy Devereaux drove his shiny new car off the showroom floor, parked it in his driveway — then looked out two hours later and saw his neighbor's dog eating it!

"I'd been saving for years to get that car and the minute I do, that damn dog Butch devours it," said the heartsick schoolteacher. "By the time I got out there to chase him away, he'd already eaten half the rubber bumper, chewed a big chunk out of the grille and gnawed a hole in the left front fender."

Flabbergasted Andy, 32, said he rushed to his neighbor's house to report what the dastardly bulldog had done.

"But all my neighbor did was grab Butch and rush off to the vet to see if his dog had hurt himself," said the ticked-off teacher.

Miracle tots joined at the chest and waist

PORT PIRIE, Australia — A 23-year-old woman made medical history here last December when she gave birth to the world's first Siamese triplets.

The baby girls — Bonnie, Sandy and Penny Morillo — are joined at the torso. They were delivered by cesarean section December 14, but their existence was a closely-guarded secret until last week, when the family agreed to go public. Doctors say the girls will be separated in an operation scheduled for later this year.

"We love our baby girls and wouldn't switch them for any others — even if they could never be normal," said proud mom Pamela Morillo. "They are so sweet and good-tempered. They never cry.

"It was a shock when we first learned we were the parents of Siamese triplets, but now we feel honored. Our babies are famous already — and they aren't even a year old yet!"

The fact the babies were joined was discovered about two months before they were born, when sonograms revealed the children's condition. Pamela and her husband Gary were told of the babies' plight and warned that the tots might not survive.

But when the girls were delivered by a team of specialists and examined, it was discovered that their condition was operable — and that the dark-eyed tots could look forward to a normal life.

"As far as we know, there has never been a set of Siamese triplets born — and certainly not a set that survived," said the babies' pediatrician. "The little girls are joined at the chest and waist. Two share a liver and one has only one kidney, but the babies are healthy.

"The parents have taken them home and will care for them there until they undergo surgery in September or October. We don't foresee any problems with the separation."

The babies — who weighed a total of 12 pounds, 11 ounces at birth — home from the hospital two weeks after their birth. Since then, the little ones have gained weight and developed normally.

The plump, happy infants can now sit propped up on their living room couch and have sprouted their first teeth. "They get along really well, which is good because they can't get away from each other like other babies," said Pamela.

"And they tend to do everything alike. When one sleeps, they all sleep and when one cries, so do the others. It's like three little people with one mind."

Pamela is nervous about her babies' upcoming operation, but she's put her little ones in God's hands.

"He'll take care of them," she says. "I know He loves them as much as we do."

6 types of negative thinking that can STOP you from being a success!

Six types of negative thinking can block your path to success — but you can overcome them with the "Triple-A Program for Beating Negative Thought," says an expert.

Dr. Gary Emery, a nationally known psychologist, outlined the six basic types of negative thinking that can keep you from achieving your career goals:

1. Magnifying the negative. People who think this way make even the smallest problems seem larger than life.

For example, a slow starter might think he's going to be fired because it takes him a little longer than his co-workers to get started on his work each day.

"The magnifier has heard nothing at all to suggest his boss is even upset, much less thinking of firing him," Dr. Emery said. "But the fear and anxiety caused by his negative thoughts will likely affect his work performance."

2. Minimizing the positive. One example of this type of negative thinking is the person who gets a raise — and feels he got it only because his boss was trying to be nice to him. He minimizes the positive things he did to deserve the raise.

3. Taking everything personally. This negative thinker believes that if his boss criticizes him for some small error, it's really because the boss dislikes him personally.

4. An "all or nothing at all" attitude. "This person believes if he's not a superstar, he's a flop," Dr. Emery explained. "There's never any happy in-between."

5. Looking at a partly negative situation as totally negative. If a boss doesn't like one part of a project, a negative thinker might assume that he hates the whole thing.

6. Jumping to conclusions. An example of this is the worker who's been expecting a promotion, yet because his boss hasn't announced it yet, he leaps to the conclusion that his boss doesn't like his performance.

To combat these six types of negative thinking, Dr. Emery suggests using his Triple-A Program:

AWARENESS — First you've got to recognize you're thinking negatively. The tip-off is that your mood will change — as soon as negative thoughts creep into your mind you'll feel glummer, less confident. Analyze what you were thinking about to cause this change.

ANSWERING — The second step is to answer your negative thoughts by discussing them with a trusted person. "You will be surprised at how often negative thoughts can melt away just by explaining them to a sympathetic ear," Dr. Emery said. In addition, the other person may be able to give you valuable advice on overcoming your problems.

ACTION — When a specific negative thought keeps popping into your head, attack it with action — do something to prove to yourself that the negative thought is wrong.

For example, "if the negative thought involves some aspect of your work performance, spend the next half hour doing a part of your job that you do really well," Dr. Emery advised. "That will prove to you that you really are capable."

CHRISTIE... HOLLYWOOD'S Answer GIRL

Q Naomi Campbell is my idol. She's the world's hottest model, she's been in movies, she's written books, everything. Now I hear she's working as a topless dancer in a New York City bar. Say it ain't so, Christie.

— Karla J., Newark, N.J.

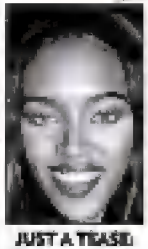
A It ain't so. But nifty Naomi did cause quite a stir recently when she strolled onstage at a Manhattan nightclub and did a steamy striptease — during the club's biweekly lesbian bash, of all things. My sources tell me she had the girl-crazy ladies so turned on they threw hundreds of dollars in wadded-up bills at her feet.



JUST A TEASE: Naomi Campbell.

Q It seems everybody's talking about Francis Ford Coppola's next movie, a film version of Jack Kerouac's On the Road. Any rumors about who the lucky stars are going to be for this Beat flick?

— Anthony T., Brooklyn, N.Y.

A Keep this under your hat, but my sources tell me Brad Pitt is targeted for the role of Sal Paradise and Sean Penn may play Dean Moriarty.

Nobody's signed any contracts yet.

NEW FLICK IN THE WORKS: Brad Pitt.

Q Were there really steamy vibrations between Anjelica Huston and Sam Elliot on the set of the TV movie Buffalo Girls?

— Alice B., Butte, Mont.

A Anjelica, who starred in The Addams Family flicks, doesn't deny she has the hots for her co-star on the recent western.

"I've always had a secret crush on Sam Elliot," the brassy brunette confessed in a recent interview.

And it's not just his leather-tough looks she likes.

"He has the voice to match," she said.

— Kim C., N.Y.C.

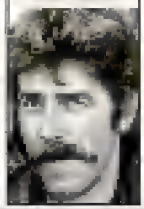
SECRET CRUSH: Anjelica Huston and Sam Elliot.



Q Why didn't Marlon Brando fly to Tahiti for his daughter Cheyenne's funeral?

— Scott A., Indianapolis, Ind.

A Marlon Brando's ex-wife, Anna Kashfi, told Inside Edition that there is a contract out on his life in Tahiti, where he is a hated man. Tahitians blame him for Cheyenne's problems and they still remember the day Brando cruelly flushed $120 in bills down a toilet in front of a polite waitress who declined to accept such a large tip — she thought it was too much and was embarrassed to take it!

A MARKED MAN: Marlon Brando.

Q Does Sly Stallone's fiancee, Angie Everhart, have a temper to match her red hair?

— Rita M., Atlanta, Ga.

A Oh yes! The fiery redhead blew a fuse when a leggy blonde reshaped into their San Diego, Calif., hotel to do her lover boy's nails. "No way, you'll have to leave," said an angry Angie. Then she got a "plain Jane" replacement.

Q I hear that some of the ads for the new movie Don Juan DeMarco are a lot raunchier than the movie itself, but I haven't seen any promos I wouldn't show my mom. What gives?

— Daniel P., St. Petersburg, Fla.

A I guess it all depends on your definition of raunchy, but here's the scoop. Several national magazines have run ads quoting Jan Wahl, a critic for San Francisco's KRON-TV, who gushed: "If you can't get laid after seeing this movie, you just can't get laid." And Jan says she wasn't talking through her hat. "Many people have told me they got lucky the night they saw the movie," she insists.

Q Is talk show queen Ricki Lake a lesbian? I know she has a huge gay following and somebody told me she married a gay man.

— Robert D., L.A.

NOT GAY — BUT HAPPY: Ricki Lake.

A Ricki isn't gay, though she was recently quoted as saying there was a time she thought she would wind up marrying a gay man — because every guy she hit it off with was gay! "It's such a feat that I actually married someone who's heterosexual," gushes Ricki. That someone is artist

TEMPERS FLAIR: Sly Stallone and his sweetheart Angie Everhart.

Q Who are the most desirable singles in America?

— Alex D. Miami, Fla.

A A British magazine has just released a list of America's most desirable singles. The selections are based on looks, brains, money, money and more money. Here are the 10 most sought-after bachelors and bachelorettes, according to Tatler:

1. Tatiana von Furstenberg, 24, daughter of designer Diane. Has own line of tummy-exposing grunge wear.

2. David Koch, 54, just bought Jackie O's co-op. Barrels of oil money.

3. Ivana Lowell, 29, daughter of the Hamptons' Lady Caroline Blackwood. In charge of ideas for a movie studio. Killer job.

FROM left to right: Macaulay Culkin, Tori Spelling, Tatiana von Furstenberg, Marci Klein and John Kennedy Jr.

4. Cheryl Henson, 33, heir to Muppets creator Jim Henson's fortune.

5. Tori Spelling, 21, only daughter of successful TV producer Aaron. Plays poor little rich kid on 90210.

6. Andrew Solomon, 31, accomplished novelist with a $300 million trust fund.

7. Marci Klein, 28, Calvin's only kid. And she has one of the neatest jobs in America: Booking musical acts for Saturday Night Live.

8. Adam Guettel, 29, musician grandson of Richard Rogers. As in Rogers and Hammerstein.

9. Macaulay Culkin, 14, Home Alone star pulls down $8 million a movie. Sure he's a little young — but it's never too early to start planning.

10. And of course John Kennedy Jr.

Bob Saxonman. The happy couple tied the knot last year.

Q A friend of mine says my favorite singer, Jimmy Buffett, was arrested and jailed for failing to pay his electric bill.

Can you tell me how to get in touch with him? I'll gladly pay his electric bill AND his bail.

— Melinda D., Columbia, S.C.

RAKING IN THE CASH: Jimmy Buffett.

A Your friend is a fool. For starters, Jimmy Buffett, 48, is one of the most heavily compensated celebrities in showbiz, raking in an estimated $30 million a year. In fact, he recently beat a path out of Key West and moved into hoity-toity Palm Beach, where he has the opportunity to hobnob with high-profile neighbors like Teddy Kennedy, George Hamilton — and Donald Trump!

Q I know it's a common question, but I have to ask it anyway because I'm dying to know the answer: What does Liam Neeson wear under that kilt in the movie Rob Roy?

— Betty F., Boise, Idaho

VERY BRIEF: Liam Neeson.

A Liam says he's heard that question hundreds of times, but you asked it, so he answered it once more for you. "About 8,000 people have quizzed me about what's under my kilt," says the actor, who is getting rave reviews for his depiction of the famous Scots adventurer. "I wish I had a witty reply, but the answer is cotton briefs."

Q I understand they are making a movie about Elton John's life and I can't wait to see it. Which actor gets to play my favorite singer?

— Stacey D., Washington, D.C.

A Nobody's been chosen for the role as yet, and Elton says it's going to be hard as hell to find any one actor who can fill the bill — because his weight has fluctuated like a yo-yo over the years. "I've been small, medium, large and extra large in my time," the singer admits. "There was one point where I got to, like, a 38-inch waist. You'd think taking that much coke you'd be very thin, but that never applied to me because if you drink four bottles of Scotch a night, it doesn't exactly take off calories."

GIANT CROCODILE EATS 2 FISHERMEN — & THEIR BOAT!

MADAGASCAR — Police in this East African island republic are pressing an all-out search for a giant crocodile that ate two fishermen — and their boat!

A native who witnessed the savage attack from the shore said the beast was more than 30 feet long and was covered with moss.

He said all that remained of the boat was a chewed plank about three feet long.

OOPS!

Coconut falls off holy man's head after he balanced it for 14 years!

By SANDRA LEE
Weekly World News

CALCUTTA, India — A holy man who balanced a coconut on his head for a mind-boggling 14 years stunned and devastated his devoted followers — when he tripped and let the coconut fall off and bust open on the ground!

Guru Dilip Rao was worshipped by thousands who believed he was blessed with divine powers that allowed him to keep the dried-up old coconut carefully poised on top of his noggin every minute of every day since 1981.

And just a few months ago he gave a rare interview and explained why so many people revered him.

"People see me with the coconut on my head for all these years and they say, 'Here is a worthy man whose teachings I can trust. This is a man who will reveal the truths of life,'" he said.

But all the love and devotion Rao earned went down the tubes just last week when the prize coconut fell off his head and cracked wide open. And the unceremonious way the coconut fell off only made matters worse.

"Rao was participating in a worship festival in his honor," one eyewitness said. "He was walking toward an altar when he tripped over a drum one of his followers had left on the ground.

"He went down in a heap and that coconut went flying off," the witness said. "And when Rao saw the coconut was busted he jumped up and threw the biggest tantrum I've ever seen.

"He grabbed the drum he'd tripped over and threw it at the poor guy who'd left it on the ground. He started cursing and screaming and even kicked the broken coconut at the crowd.

"It was a pretty ugly scene and it ruined everything we always thought about him. Many people broke down and cried."

Rao stormed off after the incident and reportedly is in seclusion

AFTER 14 years of balancing a coconut on his head guru Dilip Rao tripped and the coconut fell to the ground.

MOST GUESTS SNOOP WHEN THEY GO INTO YOUR BATHROOM!

CHICAGO — A new study shows that two out of every five guests open medicine cabinets and snoop around in the bathrooms of the homes they're visiting!

The survey, known as the 1995 Bathroom Tissue Report, was sponsored by the James River Corp., makers of Quilted Northern toilet paper.

"This confirms the basic human curiosity we all have about each other's secrets," says famed psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers. "Guests are going to snoop."

The study also found:

- A whopping 87 percent of the females surveyed said they believe cleaning the bathroom is "women's work."
- Most people believe that replacing the empty toilet tissue roll is also the woman's responsibility.

Wanna quit smoking? Put snuff between your toes!

If you want to quit smoking, try a little snuff — between your toes!

That's the advice of Dr. Gordon Rahn, an expert who says he's been recommending the technique to patients for years.

"Slip a little snuff between a couple of toes and you've got a nicotine level without getting a brown mouth or teeth or hurting your lungs," he said.

"Your toes may get a little brown, but who notices that?"

It's best to put a pea-size wad between the fourth and fifth toes, Dr. Rahn said, because there's more moisture there than between your other toes.

MY AMERICA By ED ANGER

We can balance the budget instantly with bold new plan...

LET'S ABOLISH SOCIAL SECURITY!

I'm madder than Hillary Clinton with an empty tube of cellulite cream over all this hand-wringing about Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and all those other bleeding-heart liberal government handouts.

Let's just balance the gol-durned budget, for crying out loud, and quit whining about it.

I say we abolish EVERY federal charity program on January 1, 1996. And to put my money where my mouth is, I'm turning in my Social Security card first thing in the morning.

'Get rid of Medicare, too, for crying out loud!'

Let's face it. I love guns and keep 'em all over the house — fully loaded, by gum. But I've gotta hand it to President Bush for ripping up his National Rifle Association membership in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing.

A man's gotta do what a man's gotta do. And now, my fellow Americans, I'm taking the same kind of stand so we can get this great nation back on sound financial footing.

F.D.R. was America's first Communist President — and stopped us with the Social Se-

I'll not cash another of my Social Security checks until the day I die.

My poor old granddaddy, God bless his soul, got by on what he saved for his golden years — and didn't need some Socialist giveaway to do it.

And when he and my grandmother got sick, they didn't bother going to a doctor or hospital unless they had the cash to pay for their treatment, by golly.

Isn't it about time that Americans went back to pulling on their bootstraps to get by rather than sitting by the mailbox waiting for another Social Security or Medicare check to arrive?

But what makes me so pigweepy-eyed liberal crap about how we can't let people go without welfare or medical care. I say, why the hell not?

Americans went without government charity from 1776 until 1940 when that pinko Franklin Roosevelt dreamed up Social Security to get reelected.

The only thing Social Security has done is make older Americans fat, soft and lazy. Most of 'em ought to be working for a living rather than playing golf or cluttering up the countryside in their stupid motor homes.

So I'm all for raising the legal retirement age to 95. If that doesn't solve the stupid Social Security crisis, I'll eat my hat. By the time anybody became eligible for benefits, they'd be strapped in a chair gumming baby food and waiting to kick off, by golly.

And as for all this free medical care everybody's come to depend on — I say let's end it all right now.

Real Americans don't take charity — and that's telling

FEDERAL CHARITY PROGRAMS like Social Security would be history if Ed Anger has his way.

ED ANGER SOCIAL SECURITY POLL

☐ YES: I agree with Ed Anger that Social Security should be abolished on January 1, 1996, and that older Americans ought to get off their butts and get back to work.

☐ NO: Without Social Security, Medicare and the like, millions of Americans would go down the tubes. Ed's idea is lunacy and I'll fight it every step of the way.

3-ARMED BASEBALL PLAYER COMING TO AMERICA!

MUSTAFA'S third arm has greatly developed since this photo first appeared in Weekly World News in 1990.

FREAKISH Mustafa Shariff turned his deformity into an advantage when he started playing baseball.

Braves, Yankees & Reds are fighting to get him under contract!

Weekly World News

A 19-year-old boy with a third arm growing out his back has been playing baseball in the Dominican Republic for three years and now he says he's ready to play in the Major Leagues — and several U.S. teams are bidding for his services!

Freakish Mustafa Shariff was named the Most Valuable Player in his league in Santo Domingo last season and is dominating the league this year, according to a top baseball scout who asked not to be identified.

Shariff has used his extra arm to help him become a sure-handed center fielder for the Toros Rojos, the three-time defending champion in the league.

popping .372 average against Dominican pitchers.

But even if he struggles at the plate against Major League pitchers in the United States, his incredible fielding abilities will be enough to earn him a spot on a big-league team.

"This kid makes catches with his extra arm that other players could never make," his manager Antonio Cortes said. "When he runs back to catch fly balls, he can go full speed and catch the ball with his third hand without ever having to turn around.

"I hate to lose him but he deserves to make the big money the U.S. teams pay."

Besides Mustafa's talent, he would help boost weak attendance figures. The Cincinnati Reds, New York Yankees and Atlanta Braves are reportedly engaged in a big-bucks bidding war for the young star and at least a dozen other teams have also offered contracts.

Mustafa became famous after he appeared in the November 6, 1990, edition of Weekly World News. At that time, he was living on the streets in Pakistan.

But Mustafa's eyes lit up whenever anyone offered him a chance to become a sports star. His big break finally came when Cortez mailed him a special baseball uniform and a plane ticket to the play for a team that has a good chance to make it to the World Series this season.

If Mustafa does make it to the Major Leagues, there will have to be some special rules drawn up for him.

"The league I'm in now allows me to wear a uniform with a hole in the back for my special arm," Mustafa said. "And it's important that I be allowed to wear two gloves, like I do now. But I've

COULD YOU BE PRESIDENT?

PRESIDENT CLINTON spends all his time making important decisions.

Ever wanted to know if you could do what President Clinton does everyday? Well, now you can find out!

Just take the simple test that tells you how well you think under pressure. Score a four or five total score and you could move into the Oval Office tomorrow, says top political psychologist Dr. Jane Abara.

"This test consists of everyday situations but they are no different than a quick Presidential response to the terrorist attack," says Dr. Abara.

Complete the statements below with the choice that best describes what you would do in each case. Then go through the BEST ANSWERS to see how many you got correct.

Add up your correct answers and check the test analysis that follows the quiz.

Take this test and find out!

1. You enter a room to find a young child on the window ledge. You:

(a) Call softly to the child. (b) Rush forward and try to grab the child. (c) Try to creep up on the child quietly.

2. Guests show up for dinner and you realize you forgot to turn on the oven. You:

(a) Send out for food. (b) Quickly turn on the oven and tell them dinner will be delayed. (c) Start scrambling eggs.

3. The copying machine you're using goes wild, spitting out 55 copies per minute. You:

(a) Turn off the machine. (b) Find a supervisor and get help. (c) Just stand there and scream "help" and try to pick the copies off the floor.

4. You're on a train when a passenger has a heart attack and isn't breathing. You:

(a) Pull the emergency cord at once. (b) Administer CPR or ask if anyone knows how to give CPR. (c) Let the train continue and find the conductor.

5. You see four bank robbers jump into their car and drive off. You notice their vehicle is stowed by heavy traffic, and there's a chance of catching up to them. You:

(a) Chase after them. (b) Stop a car and ask the driver to give chase. (c) Take the license number of the getaway car and call the police.

BEST ANSWERS

1. (a) You must gain the child's confidence before you approach, or you run the risk of startling the child and causing him to fall.

2. (b) Tell your guests there'll be a delay, and offer them cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. Don't disappoint your guests by serving eggs or ordering food.

3. (a) The other choices would allow the machine to continue spewing out copies.

4. (b) The important thing is to get the person breathing.

5. (c) Your suspects may be armed and dangerous.

PRESIDENT TEST ANALYSIS

4 or 5 correct: You're a take-charge kind of person. Like the President, you have what it takes to instinctively weigh your options before acting and making decisions.

2 or 3 correct: You're not ready for the Oval Office yet. You show potential but there's room for improvement.

0 or 1 correct: You're better off following orders rather than giving them. With some practice you can learn to weigh options and act appropriately but you'll never

Take the test again and try to analyze correct and incorrect answers. Ask yourself: What are the consequences of each?

Keep up-to-date on worldwide crises and come up with your own solutions. Watch TV quiz shows and play along.

Working against a buzzer or bell will force you to think quickly. Play video games and card games that help you make fast decisions.

SURGICAL IMPLANTS MAKE DOGS' EARS STICK UP ... & animal rights groups are mad as hell

OUTRAGEOUS! This dog's ears stand straight up — thanks to plastic inserts.

By LISA MERAKIS
Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — An animal rights group is up in arms over the latest fashion on dog show circuits: Silicone "rods" that make a pooch's ears stick up like radar antennae.

The bizarre fad was introduced in Europe and America in 1991 and animal experts say thousands of show dogs are now sporting the fashionable new implants.

Supporters of the practice say the plastic rods don't hurt at all — and that dogs who have them actually hear better than dogs who don't. But soft-hearted animal activists say the stiff cylindrical inserts are unnatural and cruel.

"The idea is to show off a dog's ears so judges can see how nicely they're shaped," said Thea Mendrona, director of a group called Love Our Fellow Creatures.

"The rods are also supposed to make a dog look more imposing.

"But veterinarians have told us that they restrict the way dogs use their heads and ears and are very prone to infection.

"We've seen dogs rub their ears bloody trying to remove the rods from delicate ear tissues."

The ear inserts, called Canine Ear Enhancers, are the equivalent of big hair in society ladies, according to dog fanciers.

They are now used by the top breeders and kennels to draw attention to impeccably bred and groomed pooches.

The devices are relatively inexpensive — about $40 a set — but they must be implanted by veterinarians at a cost of an exciting alert appearance. Even Chihuahuas can gain presence and stature by using the rods, proponents say.

"This is just a fascinating variation on grooming, like clipping a dog's ears or tail," said Beulah Van Demann, a top Dutch Doberman breeder.

"It can transform an ordinary dog into a really fantastic competitor."

You can get anything done by NOT making a schedule!

You can learn how to stop putting things off by following these easy tips from a psychologist.

First, develop an "unschedule." Sit down and think about what you've accomplished each day during the past week. An "unschedule" is actually the reverse of writing out a weekly schedule, then trying to live up to it. People who put things off think they've accomplished little or nothing during the week — but mentally drawing up an "unschedule" will prove that's wrong, said Dr. Lenora Yuen.

"It shows you how much progress you're making and gives you the confidence to get things done. It also helps you focus on the things you've done — rather than the things you've put off. It helps procrastinators understand that they can achieve results," explained Dr. Yuen, co-author of Procrastination: Why You Do It, What to Do About It.

Next, use the "Swiss cheese method" of getting things done. Break down large projects into minute bursts of energy to do small bits of the entire task. Don't do things in a logical step-by-step manner.

Suppose you have to clean your whole house. Instead of developing a plan to start at the front door and work your way through the house room by room, make a mental note of what needs to be done, then do any little job whenever you feel like it. You might suddenly rush upstairs and clean the bathroom. Later in the day, you might dash outside and

SUICIDE TEEN'S TRAGIC STORY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Teen suicide claims thousands of young Americans every year — and the problem is growing, experts say. These tragic deaths cut short the lives of many promising youths — and shatter the lives of those who loved them. The death of Lambert Hillman on March 14 is just one of many terrible losses, but in a way it's typical. It shows the misunderstanding, the hurt, and the hopelessness that drives our kids to kill themselves. And it reveals the heartbreak these tragic suicides leave behind.

By SUSAN JIMISON
Weekly World News

NEW EAGLE, Pa. — Popular high school football player Lambert Hillman got a speeding ticket he couldn't afford to pay — and killed himself in despair!

The 16-year-old jumped from a bridge into the Monongahela River on March 18, leaving those who loved him shocked and devastated. Friends say Lambert was desperately worried about his widowed mom's money troubles and the $100 ticket drove him beyond the limit.

"Lambert was despondent about the money problems of his family," said Chuck Fowler, a family friend and close confidant of the dead teen. "They were in dire financial straits. It was really eating at him — he talked to me about it. He didn't know how his mother was going to make it."

Five months before his suicide, Lambert lost his beloved stepfather to cancer. The dying man's medical bills were astronomical and the family had mortgaged their home to help pay them.

Lambert's widowed mom still owed $350,000 and was behind in her car payments. Every afternoon when he got home from school, Lambert fielded calls from angry creditors demanding money. MOM HAD AN EERIE PSYCHIC VISION OF HER SON'S DEMISE

Anguished mom Kathy O'Hern learned of the death of her 16-year-old son Lambert from an eerie psychic vision.

The 38-year-old woman had a haunting premonition that her youngest son's life was over the very moment he committed suicide, she told Weekly World News.

Police listed the boy as missing for nearly a month before they found his body in the Monongahela River and confirmed his death.

"He died at 10 minutes after 9 on the night of March 16. I knew it — I'll never forget the feeling," recalled Kathy, who now has one surviving son. "I can't explain it.

"It was the most horrible feeling I ever had in my life. I had to hold on to the chair. I called a friend and said, 'Lambert's missing — something's wrong.' They told me he'd probably run away, but I knew it was worse than that. I never thought he had run away. I knew he was dead."

Mrs. O'Hern, a secretary, believes her boy was tormented by recent events in his life and death. She says that while Lambert's stepdad Martin was dying of terminal cancer, the family had often spoken of the consolations of Heaven.

In the last months of his life, Lambert had sustained a football injury that had sidelined him from his favorite game. His grades were plummeting. He had sat at the bedside of his beloved stepfather, watching and holding his hand as the man died.

"He was extremely depressed over it," Fowler recalled. "He said, 'It's the money — my mom doesn't have it.' My son told me he was talking about going and jumping off a bridge."

In spite of pep talks and offers of help from his friends and Fowler, Lambert's desolation was terminal. A few hours after he got his traffic ticket, he walked out on a bridge over the deep and treacherous Monongahela River and threw himself into the icy water below.

"He was a great kid," said a grieving Fowler. "He was vice president of his high school junior class. He was so well-liked. People didn't have a bad thing to say about him. He was good-looking, he was smart, he was nice — he had everything going for him.

He wrote about death in school essay — days before he died!

A few days before he killed himself, 16-year-old high school junior Lambert Hillman wrote a heart-wrenching essay for English class on life and death. Here, in his own words, are the thoughts that occupied him as he made the fateful decision to end his own life.

"Life or death at times may depend on what you want and what you stand for. If you work hard enough throughout your life you may find wealth. You may also find happiness. That is the most important thing to me in my life.

"There are also good qualities in death. You do not have the worries that you have in life. You can be at peace in Heaven, which is what I hope for . . . If you do not enjoy life it is a means of escape.

"You have to work for happiness and if you do not achieve that, your life will not be worth living. You do have the luxury to take your own life if you do not like it.

"If you stand for hope, then give life a chance. But if you do not want it, then maybe death is what should be…

TRAGEDY STRUCK THE LAST FIVE EMPLOYEES WHO PARKED IN THIS SPACE

By KEVIN CREED / Weekly World News

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — "No one will ever park in this evil spot again!"

With those grim words, bank president Lester Webmont stood in his building's parking lot and watched as a No Parking (at) Any Time sign was permanently embedded in space E-62 — the space that many are calling "the parking spot of the damned."

"Grave tragedy has befallen the last five employees I assigned that space to," says Webmont.

Webmont

"One tragedy could be coincidence. Even two. But five horrible disasters, all connected to that one spot, are too far above the law of averages. I don't pretend to know the reasons. I don't care if I ever do. But I'm drawing the line. I'm not about to reassign E-62."

Webmont cites the following nightmarish roster of victims — all validated by published news reports:

● February 6 — Loan manager Doris Winkton is gunned down in a drive-by shooting one week after being assigned space E-62.

● February 28 — Teller Alice Fluros is paralyzed in a freak accident helping her husband build their dream home — a nail gun drops off the roof and strikes her head five days after receiving the space.

● April 11 — Public relations officer Jack Slobert's wife of 10 years suddenly leaves him for a 21-year-old pizza delivery boy nine days after he's assigned space E-62.

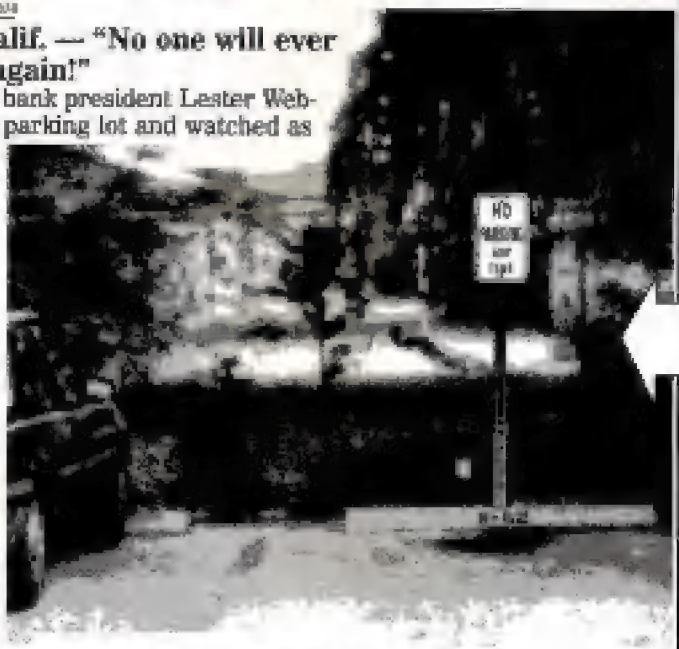
● May 9 — Teller Frank Roots dies in a plane crash — on the very day he's assigned the space.

● June 2 — A crazed neighbor slices off accountant Eli Landon's left arm with a Samurai sword four days after he first parks in space E-62.

Webmont, 44, asked that the name and location of his bank not be revealed. "I don't want to hurt the bank's reputation," he says. "But I think it's important that the public know the story so if something like this happens somewhere else, others might learn from our mistakes.

"We waited too long to take action and, without meaning to, allowed that horrible space to wreak more havoc."

Webmont refused to confirm or deny rumors that strange odors and damp cold air have been reported emitting from space E-62 — and that the last thing that it's closed for good and it's claimed its last victim."



NO PARKING sign has since been posted at the mysterious parking spot.

NEW STUDY REVEALS...

How your name influences your life!

Your name says a lot more about who you are and what you'll achieve than you probably realize.

"Names have consequences that are often remarkably prophetic — they are, in large measure, our destiny," said Dr. Ralph Slovenko, who's studied the effects of names on people.

"People make associations and assumptions based on a person's name.

"For example, a boy named Butch is thought to be tougher than a boy named Percy — so he'll be treated differently and react differently. His name will affect his behavior.

"John Minor Wisdom, Pleas Jones, William Justice and Learned Hand, all judges, surely had more than ordinary reasons for going into law after years of having their names associated with the legal system.

"A person named Robert Stork became a pediatrician, Groaner Digger, an undertaker, Dan Cloud, a pilot; Bill Dollar, an accountant; Phyllis Sweat, a women's athletic director; and Richard Sorter, a letter sorter.

"And the first American woman in space was Sally Ride!"

Your name also has an impact on your self image and what you expect of yourself, said Dr. Slovenko. "An increasing number of studies show that your name can affect such diverse aspects of your life as your health, business and personal success. For example, people with surnames Small, Little, Short or Bent are more likely to suffer feelings of inferiority.

"These feelings can be shown in either a lack of initiative or in overachieving to compensate for a name that implies a deficiency.

"So a name is an integral part of

ARE YOU A LOVE SLAVE?

Take this simple test and find out!

Are you a love slave? You can find out if you're addicted to love by taking a quiz designed by a psychotherapist — who also offers advice on how to beat the problem.

"Being addicted to love is one of the most common problems faced by both men and women in the U.S.," declared Dr. Bernard Green, author of I am Slaves: How to Find Your Addiction to Another Person.

"Love slaves become walking doormats for their partners. They are obsessed with the relationship they're in — even if it's bad."

To find out if you're a love slave, answer these questions, then check the scoring key that follows.

- Do you feel that you can't be happy when you're alone?
- Do you feel that you need a man or a woman to make your life seem fulfilled?
- Is finding the right mate your most important goal?
- Do you constantly need assurance from others, especially the person you love?
- Do you constantly worry about satisfying your mate?
- Are you possessive or jealous of others?
- Do all your hopes and dreams revolve around the person you love?
- Do you put your mate on a pedestal?
- Do you have a sexual problem, such as frigidity or impotence?
- Do you try to mold yourself to suit your mate?
- Do you constantly fear that the person you love might end the relationship?
- Do you feel dependent on your mate?

How you rate as a love slave:

Give yourself one point for every yes answer.

2 or less — You're not a love slave. You can enjoy a healthy relationship.

3 — You're probably already having relationship problems. If not, you're likely to have them in the future.

4 or more — You are a love addict. This problem has already interfered with your relationships, even though you may not realize it.

But even if you're a love slave, don't despair.

"You can overcome love addiction," said Dr. Green.

Here are the steps he recommends:

✓Go over all your good traits to help improve your self-image. For starters, the fact that you're a love slave shows that you're a loving person. You just haven't directed that love in a productive way.

✓Instead of always doing what your partner wants, start the depressed feelings you get from being a love slave.

✓Take a look at your parents' relationship. How did they treat each other? Are you imitating their marriage in your rela-

Here's what guys & gals LOVE & HATE about their bodies!

Weight and waistline are by far the physical features people would most like to change about themselves — while they are most satisfied with their eyes and ears, a new survey reveals.

What's more, 39 percent of women confess they are "not too pleased" with how they look, compared to just 16 percent of men.

The survey, conducted by a large advertising agency, included the opinions of 1,550 people nationwide.

Here's a complete rundown of the results, showing what percentage of men and women would change specific physical features:

- WEIGHT: men 56 percent; women 78 percent.
- WAISTLINE: men 49 percent; women 70 percent.
- EVIDENCE OF AGING: men 27 percent; women 48 percent.
- THIGHS: men 9 percent; women 46 percent.

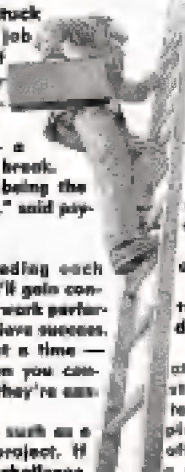
How to get out of your boring job and climb the ladder of success!



Millions of Americans get stuck in a career-halting rut on the job — but you can break out of your shell and live up to your full potential at work by following a few tips, says an expert.

"People develop boundaries — a shell — that they are afraid to break. And breaking out of this shell is being the most you can be in the work world," said psychologist Dr. W. Beryl West.

Here's Dr. West's advice:

☞ Picture yourself succeeding each time you approach a new task. You'll gain confidence that will actually help your work performance — and make it easier to achieve success.

☞ Focus on one problem at a time — you won't feel overwhelmed. When you concentrate on problems one by one, they're easier to solve.

☞ Don't put off challenges such as a new job assignment or special project. If you delay, you won't approach the challenge with enough energy.

☞ Reward yourself for a job well done. Take a coffee break, have lunch at a top restaurant. This will show you that your work pays off — and with more success, your dreams can get even bigger.

☞ Don't be afraid to fail. Consider a failure an opportunity to learn and to try something different.

☞ Don't forget to laugh. Laughter — even during difficult times — will make it easier for you to pick yourself up and move on.

☞ Use your nervous energy to your advantage.

Anxiety sharpens your senses and actually helps you do a better job.

☞ Peek away at your shell. Instead of talking to the same people at work, day after day, make it a point to talk to

I wish that they would not keep saying that America's youth are our hope for the future. Somehow it just doesn't

Success in an undertaking of significant impact will surprise and silence detractors and delight those who stand to profit from your good judgment and rock-steady guidance.

Keep an eye on your health in the days ahead. You tend to be a bit irresponsible when it comes to personal well-being.

This week will be hectic and demanding.

CANCER
June 21 – July 22

This week you can hold the key to success if you use your natural talents and strive to achieve goals you consider beyond reach.

LEO
July 23 – Aug. 22

Your indecisiveness may cause you to mess up before a project is completed. Use your willpower to keep your nose to the grindstone until it's done. Then give yourself a night off and celebrate all that hard work.

You're particularly attractive to the opposite sex this week. If you're single, explore new relationships. Marrieds and steadies should rekindle their romance.

VIRGO
Aug. 23 – Sept. 22

Your ability to see through the muddle comes in handy when you solve a problem puzzling to others.

Romance and surprise will be significant this week. Perhaps someone you only thought of as a friend will become more important in your life. Or the love you feel for someone suddenly burns hotter.

A shopping spree could turn into a bonanza.

LIBRA

A friend may try to talk you into something dumb.

This should be a super week. Projects could fall into place with little or no effort, and associates may seem more eager to please.

Chalk it up to your own charm, which is at an all-time high. Use your magic smile to your advantage with those who need gentle handling.

Take a break from your labors and celebrate with loved ones at week's end. You deserve it.

93-YR.-OLD BECOMES A FATHER FOR THE FIRST TIME!

Docs say it's a medical miracle!

PROUD 93-year-old Bill Lampard holds his daughter April.

By R. NEALE LIND / Weekly World News

SOUTHAMPTON, England — In what doctors have called a "medical miracle," oldster Bill Lampard has finally realized his lifelong dream — by fathering his first child at the age of 93!

"We tried for years to have a family," says Linda Lampard, Bill's 40-year-old wife. "Doctors said it would take a miracle.

"And that's what our little daughter April is — a miracle."

Bill, a former gas company employee, had been married to Linda for 10 years when she announced that his prayers of a lifetime had been answered — she was pregnant with his child.

It was a moment he thought he'd never see.

Bill had been married before. In 1926 he wed his first wife and they were married for 47 years without having a child, despite years of trying.

When she died in 1973, Bill was left childless and heartbroken. He remained a widower for 11 years. Then, when he was 82, he married 30-year-old Linda.

"Our wedding in 1984 was a wonderful occasion," she says. "It was the happiest day of my life.

"He became my husband, my friend, my lover and a father figure all rolled into one gentle man.

"And now that we have little April, he is absolutely transformed. He seems to have a new lease on life. He describes our baby as the best present he ever had."

And April has one special physical feature that reminds everyone of her father.

"Little April has his beautiful blue eyes," Mrs. Lampard said. "She's living proof of our love."

LOVE & MARRIAGE

Most folks are NOT attracted by looks, money or power!

By JENNIFER BROOKES / Weekly World News

What is it that attracts us to that special someone? Surprisingly, looks, money, power and prestige are far down on the list, a recent national survey discovered.

Here's what the Parents magazine survey found when it asked Americans what they look for in sizing up the opposite sex:

- 73 percent said a person should be caring and considerate.
- 61 percent said they look for someone with a good sense of humor.
- 58 percent want someone who shares their interests.
- 55 percent say they're attracted to a good conversationalist.
- 55 percent are attracted to someone intelligent.
- 50 percent want a good sex partner.
- 49 percent say their special someone should be romantic.
- 44 percent want a partner who's widely respected.
- 33 percent want someone with similar religious beliefs.
- 33 percent are attracted to a charming person.
- 15 percent say they want a woman with a good figure or a man who has a muscular physique.
- 11 percent want someone with an attractive face.
- 1 percent said they like a person with lots of money.
- And 4 percent want a special someone with power and influence. In the survey 38 percent said society places too much emphasis on physical attractiveness, and 33 percent of those blame the media and advertising for overemphasizing good looks.

The survey also found that 62 percent of people believe in love at first sight.

TV news crews paying people to commit suicide

. . . so they can film it!

By TANYA BRODER / Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — A shock wave rippled through the Federal Communications Commission after it was learned that TV news and documentary crews were paying unemployed men and women to commit suicide — so they could film it for the evening news!

According to sources within the federal agency, rumors of the bizarre practice have surfaced in Los Angeles, Miami and New York over the past year or so. But no confirmed instance of suicide for hire surfaced until late last week when the family of a New York father of three announced plans to sue a documentary filmmaker over the practice.

"They said Harold Mendenblatt, 36, had killed himself for a fee of $250,000," said an employee of the FCC who asked not to be identified. "They claim the filmmaker had approached Mr. Mendenblatt in February and offered to pay that sum to his survivors if he would do something spectacular like throw himself off a bridge or a building.

"The family says Mr. Mendenblatt was desperate. He'd been out of a job for two years. He'd been deeply depressed and worried about his family. They say that when the film company approached him, the man felt forced to accept because he knew his family would be better off with him dead than with him alive."

Mendenblatt died in a spectacular suicide which was covered up at home but made television news in many countries abroad. But his was not an isolated case, sources say.

In the past year, rumors of many made-for-TV suicides have spread throughout the industry and dozens of incidents of the death-for-money contracts have been described.

SUICIDE VICTIM Harold Mendenblatt.

Sources say the footage is enormously valuable and can be sold for millions of dollars on domestic and international markets.

The gruesome films show the victims before, during and after their deaths and command bigger prices the bloodier they are, those familiar with the films report.

In recent months three women jumped from tall buildings, a man set himself on fire, two men jumped off bridges, one shot himself and one climbed a water tower and leaped to his death to earn the suicide money.

"What's especially worrisome is that there are more and more of these made-for-television tragedies every month," said the FCC source.

"And the filmmakers have found so many potential candidates among the desperate unemployed that the prices they're willing to pay are going down. Recently a woman agreed to kill herself for only $50,000 so that her 3-year-old son could get medical care.

"The trend amounts to solicitation of suicide and that's a crime. I'm sure the authorities are going to make it a priority to put a stop to it."

Let's prove Santa Claus is real, says psychologist

By MARSHA COLSON / Weekly World News

ATLANTA — Parents can help a psychologist prove whether Santa Claus really exists by refusing to buy presents for their children this year!

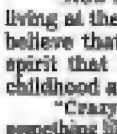
In fact, Dr. Peter Grotelle says we will never know if Santa is real or a hoax unless we stop delivering toys for him and see if he picks up the slack.

"People think I'm joking but I'm as serious as I can be," continued the expert.

"As a longtime student of Christmas legend and lore, I have always been fascinated by St. Nicholas.

"Now I know as well as you do that he's not some elf living at the North Pole. But in my heart of hearts, I still believe that he is this wonderful spirit of Christmas, a spirit that has the power to reward the innocence of childhood and make miracles happen.

"Crazy? Romantic? Maybe I am. But if we don't try something like this, if we don't put a stop to this mindless commercialization of Christmas, we'll never know the truth.



Dr. Peter Grotelle.

"This is the year we can pull together and celebrate a Christmas like no other. If children find toys under the tree, we'll know Santa is real.

"If they don't, we'll know Santa is the figment of our collective imagination and a symbol of the way we would like things to be.

"I urge every parent to join this crusade," he added. "We all can play a role in this historic crusade."

If Dr. Grotelle's Christmas sentiments are merciful, his search for the truth about Santa Claus is not.

By urging parents to withhold presents from their children, he is setting the stage for unimaginable heartbreak when — and if — the little ones wake up on Christmas morning and find empty stockings.

The potential economic impact is even more frightening.

Without Christmas sales, toy manufacturers and retailers would be in dire straits, industry analysis agree.

"The crusade has an upside and a downside, too," said Dr. Grotelle, who's promoting his crusade through newspapers and on talk radio.

"Regardless of what happens on Christmas morning, the truth about Santa Claus will pay dividends for years to come."

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS: Santa Claus.

DON'T GIVE YOUR KIDS TOYS THIS CHRISTMAS!

The world's rich have "animated" lavish parties by inviting live animals — cows, pigs, sheep, horses and even a monkey and a bear!

● Socialite Elsa Maxwell invited barnyard animals to a 1927 wingding at the Waldorf-Astoria to amuse her upper-crust pals. POKER PLAYER TOOK HIGH STAKES POT IN WW2

HOW AN UNARMED MARINE CAPTURED 1,100 GERMANS BY HIMSELF!

By JACK ALEXANDER / Weekly World News

SURROUNDED by Nazi officers, Lt. George Hearn issues the bizarre bluff which led to their capitulation.

ROCK HILL, S.C. — One of the most fantastic stories to come out of World War II involved gutsy Marine Lt. George Hearn, who strolled into an enemy-held Italian city unarmed — and single-handedly captured 1,100 German soldiers.

Hitler's terrified forces were backpedaling across Europe in April 1945 when Hearn and Corporal Peter Rago rode into the Italian port city of Chioggia in a horse-drawn cart, hoping to persuade the 30 or so Germans he had been told were there to surrender.

But Hearn got the shock of his life when he found hundreds of Germans armed with automatic weapons.

"Barbed wire and sandbagged buildings were everywhere," said Hearn, now retired and living in Rock Hill. "If ever a town looked ready for a fight, this was it."

Two German officers under a white flag took Hearn and Rago to their commander. Minutes later, muddy and unshaven, Hearn was ushered into a room to face 12 German officers.

Rago waited outside.

"I had to come up with something," said the brazen Hearn, who was known back home in Salisbury, N.C., as a poker-faced card player.

He decided to wing it, hoping to trick the Germans into surrendering. "I am in command of a forward scouting unit of my regiment, which is deployed in strength just across the Brenta River," he told the Germans.

"My colonel has sent me to offer you a chance for an honorable surrender before we start an all-out air bombardment. Our purpose is to prevent useless loss of lives."

Actually, there was no regiment across the river ready to unleash an all-out attack.

Hearn's ragtag troops included 25 Italian partisans and 15 Italians who had come over to the Allied side.

No American troops were within 100 miles of the city.

But the Germans bought his bluff — hook, line and sinker.

"If I decide to surrender, can you call off the Air Force immediately?" a bonehead German commander asked.

Hearn said he could and assured the Germans the surrender could be completed that day.

The spunky Marine notified British officers of the expected surrender.

The next day, British troops rolled into the city to find the German troops guzzling beer and their officers in a drunken stupor.

"You just do what you have to do, sometimes," said the modest retired Marine, who rarely mentions that extraordinary

FLUSHING YOUR JOHN MAY MAKE YOU SICK, SICK, SICK

. . . warns doc!

If you want to stay healthy you had better run after you flush the toilet, a scientist advises — because the average commode is a breeding ground for disease.

By SUSAN JIMISON
Weekly World News

The flushing john spews a cloud of germ-laden water droplets that can give you hepatitis, diarrhea, food poisoning, flu and other ailments, according to Dr. Charles Gerba of the University of Arizona. Toilets in public places like gas stations, restaurants and motels are the worst, he says.

"I'm surprised that no new life-form has ever evolved from a gas station toilet — that nothing ever crawls out and grabs people in gas station rest rooms," says the scientist, who has spent years doing research on toilet-spread diseases. "They're always the dirtiest."

But the toilet in your very own bathroom is filthy, too, Dr. Gerba says.

Washing it with disinfectants will reduce the level of germs, but every time you flush they're airborne again. That's because the flushing process causes "aerosolization" of toilet contents, shooting them out in a cloud of contaminated moisture that hovers six feet up and out from the bowl.

Dangerous germs are sprayed 6 feet in every direction!

COMMODES are a breeding ground for disease. They can cause hepatitis, diarrhea, food poisoning and other ailments.

"Germs are all over the place — on the floor, on your shoes," Dr. Gerba says. "At home if you keep your toothbrush in the bathroom you're basically brushing your teeth with toilet water.

"You're brushing your teeth with what you thought you flushed down the toilet."

The lavatory researcher says viruses can survive several days in a bathroom.

The dirtiest places are the toilet bowl, seat and the flush handle. After that the faucet in the bathroom sink and the doorknob harbor the most germs.

Swabbing down your bathrooms is the best way to keep germs under control, Dr. Gerba says. At public rest rooms you're better off heading for the least-used stall.

The most popular commode in a rest room with three johns is the middle one, the toilet tipster says.

It is therefore the dirtiest. The first john is the least contaminated and should be the toilet of choice.

We'll eat 500,000,000 Twinkies this year!

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Herbert Hoover was President, the old Philadelphia Athletics won the World Series and Gallant Fox took the Kentucky Derby in 1930 — the year Hostess Twinkies were born.

Twinkies are so much a part of American life that 500 million of the scrumptious cake snacks will be devoured this year, in celebration of its 65th birthday.

A two-pack of Twinkies that cost a nickel in 1930 is now 93 cents, but you'll pay honor of the Twinkie's 65th birthday, Continental Baking Co. is bombarding the news media with press releases filled with Twinkie trivia. For example:

- Twinkies were named after a St. Louis billboard advertisement for "Twinkle Toe Shoes."
- Twinkies, originally, were filled with banana cream. But World War II prompted the switch to vanilla cream.
- Twinkies were once hand-filled, one at a time. Now they are mass-produced at the rate of 40,000 an hour. The unfilled cakes are flipped upside-down and injected with filling through three small holes.
- When Superman celebrated his 50th birthday, Twinkies were served as the birthday cake.
- Twinkies have appeared in the movies Steel Magnolias and Mr. Mom.

Especially for gals . . . HOW TO LAND A GOOD JOB

By MARCIA EVANS
Weekly World News

Follow the experts' step-by-step plan

If you've been thinking about entering or reentering the job market — like more then a million women each year — here are some tips from the experts to help you land a good job.

Follow this step-by-step plan prepared by some of the nation's top personnel executives and you'll be a step ahead of the competition.

Do some soul-searching

Make sure you want to return to work or start working. If you're happy as a housewife and don't need the income, stay at home.

Try being a temp

One proven way to enter the business world is to work as a temporary. Your working schedule is flexible and you gain experience and exposure to a variety of work environments.

Use ads and agencies

The help-wanted ads are an extremely useful source, but represent only a small percentage of the jobs available.

One advantage of using an employment agency is that it will give you an opportunity to practice your interview skills and build up your confidence.

An often overlooked resource is the state employment service. Many jobs — administrative, professional and technical — are listed by private employers and government agencies. And there are no fees since these programs are supported by your tax dollars.

Explore your contacts

Where do the spouses of your friends work? Or the parents of your children's friends? If you can think of one person who might be willing to recommend that you be considered for a job, don't hesitate to ask.

your capabilities. Always tell the truth, but slant your assets to your advantage. The trick is to phrase the experiences in your resume in a manner that will interest your prospective employers.

For example, if you love working with food, your household responsibility for food shopping and meal preparation might enable you to apply for a related position in a food catering business or an assistant chef for a local restaurant or diner.

Gather references

Consider any friends, spouses of friends, or relatives now employed, professors or teachers who would remember any of your achievements — even your doctor, clergyman or any other prominent person who has known you for a period of time.

Establish a contact

If you are asked to mail a resume, do so promptly. Then, call your "contact" a few days later to find out whether your resume arrived.

If asked to come in to the organization's office, do so within a day or two.

When you arrive, ask to speak directly to the individual with whom you've had a prior conversation. Thank her or him for their assistance.

Be cordial. State that you just wanted to introduce yourself and to make sure that your application got to the right person.

Role-play your interview

Your first interview has been scheduled. The best technique to ease the tension and build your confidence beforehand is role-playing, that is, acting out the role of applicant in a practice situation.

Ask a friend to prepare a list of questions as if she or he were the interviewer, and go over them.

Dress appropriately

To create the best impression, err on the side of the conservative. No jingly or gaudy jewelry, no bright colors or bold prints. Make sure your hair is well-groomed and that your fingernails are clean and manicured. Makeup should be natural and clothing contemporary.

Be yourself

Finally! You are sitting across from the interviewer. You are prepared, but you may be apprehensive. You are asking yourself, "How should I act?" The best advice is: "Don't act — just be yourself." There is room in the work world for many personality types.

Listen carefully to the interviewer

The interviewer is responsible for interviewer take the lead in the discussion. Listen carefully to questions posed by the interviewer so that your responses will be appropriate. Answer as clearly and succinctly as possible, and make your responses business oriented rather than personal.

Send a thank-you note

Saying "thank you" is not just a matter of courtesy. It can have a very positive effect on your chance of getting the job.

A simple thank-you note or a follow-up telephone call to your interviewer will distinguish you from other applicants.

Expect rejection but don't give up

You've found the perfect job . . . and they hired someone else! Take heart. Almost everyone who is in pursuit of a job frequently faces rejection. But don't give up.

And finally . . .

The day will come. The phone will ring and the voice on the oth-

LINCOLN'S ASSASSIN LIVED TO A RIPE OLD AGE

By ROB CUNNINGHAM / Weekly World News

John Wilkes Booth, the man who shot Abraham Lincoln, wasn't killed by federal troops who cornered him in a barn in Port Royal, Va. — he escaped to live another 38 years under two phony identities!

The man gunned down by U.S. troops WASN'T John Wilkes Booth, experts say

That's the astonishing claim of two researchers who believe another man was gunned down in that barn on April 26, 1865, and that Booth escaped to live to the age of 85 under the names John St. Helen and David George before apparently committing suicide in 1903.

Booth researchers Nathaniel Orlowek and Arthur Ben Chitty are so convinced they are right they have launched an intensive search for the real Booth's missing mummified cadaver.

They are also seeking a court order that will allow them to exhume the body of the man killed in the barn and mistakenly buried as Booth in an unmarked grave in Baltimore, Md.

"Pathologists at the Smithsonian Institution are waiting to examine the remains to try to determine if they are Booth's," Orlowek explained. "They will be looking for known identifying marks — a broken left leg, a crushed right thumb, and an oddly scarred right eyebrow.

"But the one thing that would really solve the mystery is the mummy of John St. Helen. If we can locate that, I'm confident we'll be able to prove he is John Wilkes Booth, not the man buried in that grave."

History books tell how on April 14, 1865, Booth shot President Lincoln as he sat in a box at Ford's Theater in Washington, D.C., and how he broke his left leg leaping to the stage during his escape. He and fellow conspirator David Herold were tracked by federal troops and finally cornered 12 days later in a barn on the farm of Richard Garrett near Port Royal, Va. Herold surrendered. Booth, on crutches and armed with a carbine, was shot dead.

ENGRAVING shows federal troops storming the barn in Virginia where Booth had holed up.

Orlowek and Chitty say the history books are wrong!

According to their scenario, Booth escaped from the barn before the troops arrived and another man inside the barn was gunned down.

EXPERT Nathaniel Orlowek wants to open Booth's grave.

Orlowek and Chitty say Booth made his way to Winchester, Tenn., where he took the name John St. Helen and married Louisa J. Payne. He eventually settled in Granbury, Texas.

In 1877, the widow Payne died and Booth, now using the name John St. Helen, left Granbury and moved to Enid, Oklahoma Territory, where he lived with a young attorney and his closest friend. "I am John Wilkes Booth," he declared. But St. Helen didn't die, and when he was strong enough to travel, he fled from Texas.

In 1903, an itinerant house painter named David George poisoned himself in a hotel in Enid, Oklahoma Territory.

Before he died, he told the desk clerk his real name was Booth and asked him to summon Bates. The attorney went to Enid and identified the body as St. Helen.

Because no one claimed St. Helen's body, Bates had it mummified and stored it in his home until he died.

Bates' widow later sold the mummy and for a number of years it was exhibited in a touring carnival in another.

In 1931, the mummy was examined by six doctors who found it had a broken left leg, a deformed right thumb, and a scarred right eyebrow, physical injuries identical to those Booth is known to have sustained in life.

In 1953 it was left with the owner of an apartment house in Philadelphia, Pa., as collateral for unpaid rent. Where it went after that is a mystery Orlowek and Chitty are desperately trying to solve.

Electronic babysitter NEW TV ZAPS KIDS WHEN THEY'RE BAD!

By KARL CREIGHTON / Weekly World News

TOKYO — A Japanese electronics firm has introduced an astonishing new interactive television that not only babysits children, it disciplines them when they misbehave!

Equipped with futuristic electronic sensors and a high-powered computer brain, the 32-inch Electro-Sitter "watches" children, scolds them when they get out of line — and administers a mild laser "burn" when they act like brats.

"The future is not only clear, it's here — now!" gushed Ichiro Higa, vice president of Takahasi Electronics.

"Our television incorporates up-to-the-minute, state-of-the-art technology — technology that makes the unit at least as good as a human babysitter and, in some very important ways, even better."

With patents in hand, Takahasi is racing to get Electro-Sitters into production and begin worldwide distribution in time for Christmas.

With the exception of a sensor-containing "turret" on top of the cabinet, the babysitting TV looks like any other set. The difference, of course, is how the Electro-Sitter "watches" kids.

"The turret contains electronic 'eyes' and 'ears' that are adjusted to monitor children up in a range of 26 feet," said Ichiro.

"The parent sets the scan distance to suit his or her needs, and the TV does the rest. If a child becomes too active or too loud, the sensors signal the computer brain, which plays back the pre-recorded voice message: 'Stop. Calm down.'

"If the child responds, nothing else happens. If he continues to misbehave, a small laser targets the child and issues a mild burn.

"Should the child attempt to venture beyond the pre-set range of play, the laser disciplines him again and telephones the parent.

"I want to emphasize that the laser doesn't damage the skin — it merely causes a jolt of pain."

Electro-Sitter got mixed reviews during a recent technology show in Tokyo.

Proponents argued that the units will be a boon to working parents who have young children at home.

Critics believe the TVs are little more than high-tech "child abusers" and should be banned.

Regardless of the debate, the company expects to sell 200,000 units in the United States and Canada in 1996 alone.

"By the year 2000, we believe Electro-Sitters will be a fixture in any home with kids," Ichiro said.

A father's mood has more effect on an adolescent daughter than her mother's mood does, according to a surprising new study.

"It had always been assumed that the mother was by far the more influential figure. Our study contradicts that," declared Dr. Rex Forehand, expert on family research.

He based his conclusions on his study of 26 families with daughters aged 10 to 14. He and a fellow researcher measured levels of depression hand. "The higher the father's depression, the more likely it was that the daughters would report being depressed.

"But the mother's level of depression wasn't as important."

And adolescent daughters tend to identify more with their fathers than their mothers because as the girls reach adolescence, they have more conflicts with their mothers, he said.

In addition, the girls who view their fathers as the most

Dear Billy Graham, my husband and I no longer love each other

BILLY GRAHAM'S ANSWERS FOR TROUBLED MARRIAGES

'Our culture puts feelings first, but true love is not based on feelings,' Billy Graham says

By Dr. Billy Graham

"My husband and I no longer love each other, and there just doesn't seem to be much point in keeping our marriage together any longer. Do you think we are wrong to think like this?"

Genuine love is not — or should not be — based on feelings. God doesn't always feel good about what we are doing, but He always loves us.

The question is not how you feel about your husband at the moment. The question is, are you willing to love him? If you are, then feelings of love will follow. If you are not willing to love him, then you will experience no feelings at all.

Our culture puts feelings first, but true love isn't based on feelings. That is why there are so many divorces today. When the early romantic feelings in a marriage do not remain constant as they do during dating, many people believe divorce is the answer.

They try to find someone else who can rekindle those good feelings. Some marry many times, in constant search of a "high" that can never be maintained.

As you look back on your marriage, it would be good for you to think about what has gone wrong. Has there been a slow drifting apart, a slackening in communication and trust? Have other things — a job, money, personal ambition — come between you and your husband?

Have there been little things — a sharp tongue, an unforgiving spirit — that have eaten away at your relationship? One of the hardest things you both may have to do is to face these things and say "I'm sorry."

But I also want to challenge you to add a new element to your marriage. That missing ingredient is God.

God gave marriage to us, and a solid marriage actually involves three — you, your husband and God. Let God heal your marriage. It is worth it, and He wants to help you if you will but turn to Him.

"I can't believe this is happening to me. My husband is in his late middle age, and he says he has fallen in love with a girl who is in her early 30s. He says he just can't help it."

I have often asked myself why this kind of thing happens. It is, unfortunately, not that uncommon for a man who is middle-aged or older to start acting like a giddy teenager in least a refusal to face the fact that he is getting older. It makes him "feel young again" and diverts his attention from getting older.

Whatever reason, your husband must come to grips with the fact that he is responsible for his action. His statement that "he just can't help it" is to escape from that inevitable fact he instead needs to come to grips with it and discover that it can be a wonderful time of life.

Your husband needs to repent of this action of his, and there is no shortcut to that. It not only is something which hurts you, but it is wrong in husband know that you love him and will forgive him for what he has done.

"What do you think is the biggest problem in marriages? I have heard people say it is finances, but in my experience the biggest problem is in-laws who try to interfere."

There are many practical concerns that can cause serious problems in a marriage, and I think you have mentioned two of them.

Interfering in-laws need to understand that breaking into a marriage can be like a burglar breaking into a home.

It can be a violation of one's privacy and sow seeds of discontent that may actually contribute more to marital stress than to the resolution of problems.

You should gently tell them that while you appreciate their concern, you would rath-

EXPERT CLAIMS: Near-death experiences improve people's lives

Near-death experiences change people dramatically, an expert says. People who come close to death or experience clinical death and then recover are changed for life.

By JOHN WILKINSON
Weekly World News

"They come back better people, brimming with self-confidence and a new sense of opportunity," declared psychologist Dr. Kenneth Ring.

In one case, an unskilled laborer named Tom S. became a physics whiz after a near-death experience, in which he was almost crushed to death in 1978.

"Tom had been an undistinguished high school student. But he underwent a strange transformation after his near-death experience," revealed Dr. Ring, who is past president of the International Association for Near-Death Studies.

"Tom enrolled in college, immersing himself in the study of physics, a subject he hadn't cared about before. According to his family, he began talking like Einstein — with more letters and numbers than words."

Another case dealt with a Canadian businessman named Joseph Dippong, who changed dramatically after he was nearly strangled to death in November 1970.

"When he returned from his near-death experience, Dippong began a new chapter in his life," confided Dr. Ring.

"His interest in material wealth was replaced by a thirst for spiritual understanding. He gave up his old business holdings and studied the world's religions, and began publishing a religious magazine."

In another case, a 41-year-old North Carolina housewife named Stella, who almost died after surgery in June 1977, underwent a total personality change.

"The formerly shy woman became a successful businesswoman actively involved in her city's local politics," said Dr. Ring, who's written two books on near-death experiences.

In yet another fascinating case, a nurse named Mary C., who nearly died in an auto accident, has developed an eerie ability to communicate with her patients.

Dr. Ring revealed: "Her psychic abilities have given Mary the talent for appearing in hospital rooms when she is most needed — without being paged."

PROUD AS A PEACOCK! Ernest Tripp shows off his new hair transplant.

Disaster at cheapo Mexican clinic!

HAIR GONE

Baldy's $199.95 transplant goes

Aging playboy Ernest Tripp went to Mexico for a cheapo hair transplant — and now his low-cost locks fall out in giant handfuls every time he shampoos!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Weekly World News

The 57-year-old Albuquerque, N.M., man says he blew $199.95 hoping to look better for the ladies — and wound up looking like a dog with the mange.

"They promised me I was going to have a crop of thick, shiny hair and that I would look years younger by the time they'd finished with me," says the peeved tile distributor.

"At first I was very pleased with their work — but that was before I washed my hair. The first time I shampooed, three or four big chunks came out and washed down the drain. I was pretty upset, to say the least, but I thought maybe I'd used the wrong shampoo or scrubbed too hard.

"But now I realize that my hair is going to fall out no matter how I wash my hair. It comes out in big clumps every time I shower. I had a cheap, lousy transplant and it isn't going to last worth a damn."

Tightfisted Ernest decided to go south of the border for a transplant to avoid the high prices charged in this country.

He called clinics throughout Mexico haggling over price until he found one outside Mexico City that promised to do the job for a rock-bottom $199.95.

"They did it under local anesthesia in February and the whole thing took just four hours," Ernest recalled.

"I walked out with a new head of hair, feeling like a million bucks. It was all synthetic fibers, but it looked real good.

"They told me not to wash it for at least two weeks so it could 'set,' so I had no idea I was in for trouble until March.

"Now I find chunks of hair on the floor or on my pillow or somewhere every day and I look so hideous I won't set foot outside my door without a stocking cap on.

"And those ladies I wanted to impress — I cross the street and run every time I see one of them coming so they won't see me looking like this.

ERNEST WILL SOON BE KNOWN as a chrome dome!

"I'm going to sue the clinic in U.S. courts, but he says he'll do everything he can to keep other skinflints from making the same mistake he did.

"Don't go to Mexico to get
